RHAM (ram), n. colloq. 1. Regional school attended after the elementary school. 2. Group of people attending functions therein. 3. An assortment of blue and gold Indians (generically known as Sachems) and wild hordes of pygmies (generically known as the Junior High). 4. Various conglomerations of students designated as "teams" with an inherent desire to win, sometimes surprised by loss. (Derivation from Regional Hebron, Andover, Marlborough.)

Understanding (un' der-stan' ding), n.

1. Knowledge of each other's meaning and wishes.
2. Discernment, insight.
3. Power of comprehension.
4. A friendly or harmonious relationship.
5. Adjustment of differences.
6. Dedication of Triangle.

FALLING

Faculty (fakul-te) n. 1. A department of learning or instruction. 2. The body of instructors in an institution of learning. 3. Notable assets: unlimited quantities of patience, understanding, and endurance. 4. Presumed function: to properly indoctrinate budding students to acceptable standards of the adult world; to entertain.

MR. J. COLIN PUSHEE
Principal

To the Members of the Class of 1970:

Your commencement privilege is to usher in a new decade, and coupled with this is the consequent responsibility of meeting the challenge of this period. It is a time that promises everything and guarantees nothing. You will be asked to declare where you stand — What is your commitment?

The previous decade noted monumental achievement for our country in space travel. It was also a time when the computer became increasingly part and parcel of our lives. This latter development, so necessary to the continuing progress of our technology, nonetheless carries with it a threat of depersonalization. We can become mere automatons, the output of a digital digestion that would reduce humanity to figures and formulae.

Therefore, we would urge that you identify yourselves in a constructive public effort. That you live a life of meaning and purpose; and that you not be lost in a swamp of ambiguity. Read again, if you will, Capek's R.U.R., or Huxley's Brave New World and take heed, for this fiction has a disturbing reality about it.

We wish the members of the class of 1970 well in their involvement with their times, and we would ask that they bring to their appointed tasks that spirit of achievement that distinguished their years at RHAM.

Underclassmen (un-der-clas'-men) n. 1. Those who have not yet attained the status of Senior. 2. A challenge for the teachers, an occupation for the janitors, and a problem for Mr. Sernoffsky. 3. Like a good wine, they improve with age. 4. Predominant characteristics—general lack of maturity, but they try harder. Burning in their quest for knowledge—not yet discovering, as Seniors, that it really doesn't matter. 5. Natural habitat—often observed running in halls after the bells, with panic stricken faces and glassy eyes; seen in class intimidating the teacher; or picked up unconscious on the run to Holbrook; never in courtyard.

Athletics (ath-let'-iks) n. 1. A system of athletic training. 2. Athletic games and exercises collectively. 3. Frequent activities—jumping up and down like an idiot; standing exposed in steamy shower rooms; madly chasing a muddy soccer ball; lying broken on the floor; sneaking across dimly lit parking lots; jabbing, tripping, and shoving when the ref's head is turned. 4. Benefits—the unique feeling that you've accomplished something, increase in self-confidence, and sometimes a heightened social status. 5. Participation includes nearly limitless practice, sacrificing of free time, asking your friends for a ride home, cold suppers, and trying harder to get usual grades.

Farewell (far-well') n. 1. Expression of good wishes at parting; goodbye. 2. Appropriate term for the last page of a yearbook—in other words we tried, here it is, we're leaving. 3. A word best spoken with a tear in one's eye, a tremor in one's voice, and a laugh in one's soul. 4. Reversed phrase indicating status of Senior Class after ten years. 5. Something you say to the cop as you leave the dance. 6. Something the cop says to you as he tears off the ticket and walks back to his cruiser. 7. Synonyms—So long, Take it easy, See ya later, Auf Wiedersehen, Hang in there; expressed with a handshake at graduation and the clink of a flip-top at the following party.

Farewell...

We curse, kick, despise, and say we'll die if we don't get out of here soon. Funny thing is, after coming back in a year, it seems that somehow, in some way, those years weren't so bad after all. They were pretty good.
